On a back road in Vermont hangs an elegant sign "Yesterday's Inn" — guests welcome. Sportswriter John and his college-age son David are intrigued by the invitation and take time out of their camping trip to stay at the charming Victorian house. There they learn the story of the inn and its owner Bill. Bill established the inn to try and create a refuge for those disheartened by the modern world. The inn harkens back to a simpler time and John. About the Author Robert Geoffrey was born and raised in Yorkshire in Great Britain. After finishing college he emigrated to the United States and has never found a reason to leave. Geoffrey has previously published A Letter to My Son available through
